CANDIDATES FOR SENATE

Two Cutting Affairs Among Negroes—General News
Notes.

The Times-Dispatch Bureau, 145 North Sycamore Street, Petersburg, Va., January 23.
Special meetings of the two branches of the City Council will be held this week, the lower branch tomorrow night and the Aldermen on Friday night. The purpose is to arrange details for laying water mains across the Atlantic Coast Line road so as to reach the Firstville Sanatorium, which is to open in the early part of February for the free care of tuberculosis patients.

Death of Old Citizen.
Jacob Cohen, an old and well-known citizen and prominent manufacturer, and a brave Confederate soldier, died this morning in his home on Adams Street. He had been in feeble health for some time. Mr. Cohen was about seventy-one years old, and is survived by his wife and five children—Isaac, Aaron, Abraham and Miss Hannah Cohen, and Mrs. Emanuel Levy, all of this city. Mr. Cohen was for years actively engaged in mercantile business, and was highly respected and popular in the community.

Robert T. Stone, a former well-known citizen and native of Petersburg, but who had been a resident of Norfolk for many years, died in the latter city this morning. The remains will be brought to Petersburg for burial tomorrow. Mr. Stone had relatives and many warm friends in this city.

Candidates for State Senate.
John V. Harris, a prominent lawyer and citizen of Dinwiddie, former judge and Commonwealth's attorney of the county, has formally announced his candidate for the State Senate, subject to the will of the Democratic party. P. H. Drewry, a prominent young member of the Petersburg bar, is being urged by his friends to offer for the Senate, and it is thought may yield to their wishes, though he has made no decision in the matter.
Petersburg and Dinwiddie constitute the Twenty-ninth Senatorial District.

GLASS ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

He Will Run for Seat in Senate Formerly Occupied by Major Daniel.

APPEALS TO THE PEOPLE

Denounces "Machine," and Wants No Votes That "Can Be Delivered."

The following announcement of Congressman Carter Glass's candidacy for the United States Senate, "released for publication in morning papers of Wednesday," has been received by The Times-Dispatch from C. D. Hamner, secretary to Mr. Glass:

Washington, January 23.—Representative Carter Glass, of the Sixth Virginia District, will be a candidate for the United States senatorial nomination at the September primary for the term for which the late Major John W. Daniel was elected by the General Assembly a year ago, and which was vacated by the latter's death last June.
Mr. Glass, in connection with his public denunciation of the Norfolk primary frauds on November 27 last, announced that he would very probably be a candidate for the Senate to succeed his late townsman, who so long had been honored by the State. "But there must be encouragement," asked Mr. Glass at that time, "for anybody not identified with machine methods to be a candidate for anything in the State under the chaotic conditions created by the recent decisions of the Norfolk and Portsmouth courts? They have swept away even the attenuated safeguards of the primary which existing statutes provide, and leave us in a situation full of peril to the integrity of the Democratic party and the good order of the State."

AVOWS HIS PURPOSE.

Several days ago the Virginia Court of Appeals virtually overthrew the lower court decisions which had pronounced unconstitutional the statutory penalties against frauds at primary elections; and to-day Mr. Glass definitely avowed his purpose to offer for the senatorial nomination.

"It is my intention," said the Sixth District Congressman, "to be a candidate for the full term in the Senate to which Senator Daniel was elected by the Virginia General Assembly a year ago, and which will be vacant after Daniel's death. The Governor has made an appointment for the remaining part of Senator Daniel's unexpired term, which ends March 3, 1911, and as I have understood, he will await the decision of the Democratic voters of Virginia, as it shall be rendered at a primary election, before making a further interim appointment. This will leave the position fairly open to every Virginia Democrat who may aspire to succeed Major Daniel in the Senate, without prejudice to any."

"I have not especially desired to be a candidate for the Senate. Although I have some time ago by some strong men of the State to announce myself for the place, my letter files attest the fact that I have consistently preferred to support some one else for the office, and have tendered my services without reservation to other gentlemen for whom I have felt that I could wage a more effective fight than for myself."

However, being amply apprised of certain conditions preceding, attending and following the illness and death of the late senior Senator, I have said from the first that I was resolved that the people of Virginia should have an opportunity to decide for themselves whether they desire to represent them in the Senate of the United States. Instead of Major Daniel, I have said no one better entitled to aspire to the place, or better equipped to discharge its functions, or better circumstanced for any office, but I would never be content to secure any man's vote for public place under a misconception of my attitude on any question that he might honestly think is involved in my candidacy. Hence this reference to the subject here.

in some quarters objection is already being urged to my candidacy for the Senate on account of my antagonism to the saloon traffic in liquor. My position on this question has not varied a hair's breadth for a quarter of a century. I have always been hostile to the open saloon. This fact was not regarded as a disqualification when I was elected to the Virginia Senate, or subsequently, when I was chosen a member of the Constitutional Convention, nor has it ever been urged against me at any time during the nine years I have represented my district as a Democrat in Congress. There is no earthly reason why it should be projected now. This issue should be submitted to the people for their decision, apart from any man's candidacy
the subject here.

"I have not decided to be a candidate for the Senate without much thought. I fully realize the desperate nature of the enterprise and understand how strongly entrenched the opposition is. But I shall go out among the people of the State, and face to face, tell them for what I stand and ask them to use me as their servant in the task of breaking down abuses that I know do exist, and as their repre-

"In the prosecution of the campaign I shall not use, or sanction the use of, machine methods in my behalf. I never have done this, and never will. My appeal will be directly to the people, and not to the politicians, and I am time after the campaign has opened they are pretty well understood now, as I have never tried or desired to conceal them. I was reasonably active as a member of the Virginia Senate and had some part in the work and debates of the Constitutional Convention. I have been nine years a minority member of Congress, where, time and again I have recorded my convictions on party questions and served my constituents in a business way. In this connection I take leave to repeat what I have before had occasion to say, and that is that a man's record is public property when he asks for public place, and always subject to limitations of decency and propriety. It may properly be examined and freely criticized. I shall not object to this in my own case nor hesitate to apply the doctrine in the prosecution of my campaign." the road is in very bad condition, and he will advise a number of changes in location, but that on the whole the road can be put in good condition without marked change. He will consult with county officials and make suggestions after finishing the trip.
